- The customary gift is exercised independently of a gift.
- A customary gift is a low-value gift made on the occasion of a particular event (birth, marriage, Christmas, birthday, examination, others) and must not result in the donor's impoverishment.
- From civil and tax perspectives, it is generally accepted that a customary gift is outside the scope of the donor's estate.
- In terms of taxation, the administration takes into account a cost price of zero for the donee.
- A customary gift is established without the presence of a civil-law notary.
